Academic Research

B.Sc. Thesis — TRACE: A Multi-Modal Framework for Curriculum Bottleneck Detection Jul 2025 – Aug 2026

Department of CSE, RUET

Asked which university courses hold students back, and built a statistical framework combining network analysis, Bayesian modelling, and sentiment analysis to find them. On simulated curricula, merging the three signals' shortlists reached a top-8 precision of 0.65 against 0.32 for averaging them, when each planted problem course showed up in only one signal. Ran a causal check on 23,369 student records with backdoor-adjustment regression, bootstrap confidence intervals and sensitivity analysis, an approach applicable to risk and portfolio analytics.

Selected Projects

StudentAI | AI-Powered Learning Platform Mar 2025

Built and deployed an end-to-end AI assistant during industrial attachment at Brain Station 23, covering document understanding, question answering, and automated assessment generation. Implemented secure authentication and shipped it to production.
